FATHER RYAN

Gives Gotham a Poetic Boom—The Good and The Bad of It. N. Y. Cor. New Orleans Times-Democrat,

All the highways of seas and lands mee in New York. Like an immense magnet, attracts to itself the energies of all the world. It is not the ships from all shores nchored in the harbor; it is not the railoads from all over the continent converg-ng towards this great centre; it is not the vast business establishments spread all over the city; it is not the massive and magnificent residences of the fortunate in ife, nor the tenements and hovels of the miserable, nor any such material things hat gives to the visitor the real character that gives to the visitor the real character of the city. It is the people. Of all races, from all lands, you meet them on every street, and all work, work, work—some with hands, some with bith, some in honest ways, some with the wits of dishonesty, but for all the watchword is work. Once ideas ruled. But dollars have dethroned ideas, and they govern the government and are presidents of the people. "How much are you worth?" That settles your status—defines your position, and gauges your influence. New York That settles your status—uennes your posi-tion, and gauges your influence. New York is the Rome of Mammon. Dollars there are dogmas. New York, which to a narrow eye seems the very Babylon of iniquity, you will find a hidden Jerusalem, a holy city with a thousand tabernacles before which with a thousand tabernacles before which religion worships. At first you only see the veil—dark, woven of wickednees, bordered with crime—but behind that black veil is many holy of holies of beautiful lives, of glorious virtues. There is not on earth a city of such charities and generosities. And, breast to breast with men who are working with all energies for money, you will find men of equal energies working for the amelioration of human wants. I know too little of other churches save my own to form an estimate of their numbers or their zeal; but, speaking only of my or their zeal; but as speaker ms would in a could carrie. Russian Convicts.

Wilna (Russia) Dispatch to the London Times.

Two letters from convicts transported to Siberia gave some horrible details of savage treatment on the part of the officials, &c.

The introduction of the whip in prison for The introduction of the whip in prison for certain political prisoners; the voyage down the Volga of seventy-four men and women packed together on a foul and filthy barge; the further journey by road from Ekaterinburg, eight men in each small cart, while the officers probably pocketed the money assigned for providing more vehicles; how innocent women, following their husbands, and even a child of two years old, were chained hand and foot with the rest, how the men were all compelled to be shaved, contrary to the rules for political prisoners; how the chief of the convoy brutally pulled the hat off a female convict from Odessa, and an inspector struck another women on the hat off a female convict from Odessa, and an inspector struck another women on the breast with a boot, and by his orders a number of other women pulled her down by the hair and tore off her clothes, which she refrased to exchange for a convict dress, leaving her exhausted and naked before a crowd of men—all this and much more is here related. Fifty or sixty arrests are mentioned, and the celebrated Nihilist and author, Tchernishefsky, is said to have been allowed to go to Astrakan. Among other things the paper also declares that Germany has gained an undeniable diplomatic victory over Bussia, and would unmatic victory over Russis, and would un doubtedly gain a military one in case of

The Japanese are excessively nice in their gardening, but the aroma that proceeded from the symmetrical fields was often very unpleasant. On the other side we took tiftin at a scruplously clean tea-house, paying elevan sen for it. Fattening Sheep. Tribune and Farmer.

It is now stated as a well known fact that It is now stated as a well known fact that in different breeds of the same species the same fodder may produce very different effects. All experiments hitherto, however, have failed to show any notable differences of digestive power in such cases, and it would thus appear that the observed differences are due to the varying energy with which the constituents of the body are oxidized. In an experiment with two mature schep, a Southdown and Merino, on identical rations, from which identical amounts of the several nutrients were dion identical rations, from which identical amounts of the several nutrients were di-gested, Weiske found that the apparent gain of "fiseh" (nitrogenous matters) was greatest in the Merino sheep; but this dif-terence was somewhat more than covered ierence was somewhat more than covered by the greater growth of wool. So far as this single experiment proves anything, it shows that not only the digestive powers but also the proteid metabolism of different breeds of sineep are essentially the same, and indicates that the differences in the case of fattening are due to differences in the rapidity with which non-nitrogenous substances are oxidized in the body.
